

CONDITIONS OF USE & DISCLAIMER

By using the intranet of EXPRA you are automatically accepting, and therefore bound by the following terms and conditions.

This intranet is property of EXPRA aisbl, an international not-for-profit association registered in Belgium, and is meant for internal use only by the members of EXPRA.

To be able to consult the intranet, you must sign in via an electronic registration. Your username and password are strictly confidential. You are personally responsible for the protection of your password and to avoid any abuse. All activities on this intranet involving the use of your password and username will be considered as having been executed by you. Please contact EXPRA as soon as possible in case of loss or if you suspect that the confidentiality of your data has been compromised.

Any personal data obtained through this intranet will only be used for internal purposes inside EXPRA. This personal data will not be communicated or sold to third parties under any circumstances. In accordance with the Belgian Law on privacy, you have the right to consult and correct your personal data.

As provided by Belgian Privacy Law you can always consult your personal data and, if need be, modify/correct them, free of charge. If you require further information and/or comments or wish to communicate changes, please contact EXPRA: Mr Joachim Quoden, Managing Director of EXPRA, joachim.quoden@expa.eu

The content of this intranet shall be in conformity with all applicable competition and antitrust laws. The intranet will not disclose any commercially sensitive information or disclose any non-public information regarding pricing, customers, sales or commercial strategies of the EXPRA members.

Unless otherwise mentioned, the information on this intranet is non-confidential and free of rights. The information on the intranet is strictly reserved for the use of the EXPRA members. The information on the intranet can only be used by the EXPRA members in the framework of their statutory purposes and for as long as they remain a member of EXPRA. EXPRA is entitled to grant special access to external consultants to all or a part of the information on the intranet. In the event an EXPRA member or external consultant wishes to pass information on the intranet to third parties, a prior and written approval by EXPRA is required.

EXPRA reserves all intellectual property rights on the intranet. Certain graphic elements that can be consulted via or on the intranet are delivered by the users or third parties and may be protected by trademark law and/or copyright. There may therefore be limitations on the use and reproduction, which requires the author's prior permission.

Downloading electronic content and associated downloads is done entirely at the user's own risk. EXPRA bears no responsibility for the corruption of files or transmission of viruses through data transfer.

If the user requires an upload of information on the intranet, this information may not violate any antitrust and competition laws or any intellectual or other property rights of third parties. The user of the intranet remains solely responsible for the content of any documents which he requires to upload.

EXPRA engages every effort to prevent interruption in consultation of the intranet. However, EXPRA is in no position to guarantee that the intranet will not be free of any interruption of any kind or be affected by other technical problems.

EXPRA shall not be liable for errors, omissions or inaccuracies on the intranet. In case you detect any errors in the provided information, you can contact EXPRA at any time at the contact details below.

The present conditions for use and disclaimer are governed by Belgian Law. EXPRA accepts no responsibility and has no liability in the event that the content and/or the intranet does not comply with the laws of a jurisdiction outside Belgium.
